Final defendant in teen kidnapping sentenced

BY MARK CAMPBELL

The third and final defendant in the June 19, 2019 abduction, assault, intimidation and humiliation of a 14-year-old Madison girl by three fellow teenagers has been sentenced to nine years in prison with six of that suspended under a plea agreement with the Jefferson County Prosecutor's Office.

Jaylon Walker Wayne Pace, now 20, had previously pleaded guilty to one count of aiding, inducing or causing an offense (kidnapping) of the teen during a five-hour abduction by two older girls who removed her from a sleepover and forced her to walk to two other homes where they humiliated and assaulted the victim repeatedly.

The ordeal, which was captured in part on video, ultimately ended up at Pace's

Hanover driver dies in Circle K crash

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County Sheriff's Office deputies responding to a single vehicle crash in Hanover Wednesday found the driver dead in the vehicle but the death appears to be unrelated to injuries from the accident.

The crash occurred at about 4 p.m. near the Circle K in Hanover when a vehicle driven by Sharon Washburn, 71, of Hanover, went into a ditch near the entrance to the parking lot of the gas station and hit a guardrail, Chief Deputy Josh Taylor said.

Officers arrived to find the vehicle nearly on its side with a tire over the guardrail and Washburn dead at the scene.

Officers believe Washburn's death is related to a medical incident suffered prior to the car making

Citing declining revenue due to the COVID-19 pandemic and a shift by customers to online streaming options, Madison's Family Video outlet, the city's final brick-and-mortar movie and game rental store, announced its closing recently. The move will end more than four decades of stores dedicated to movie and game rentals since the early 1980s from national franchises to mom-and-pop outlets covering various technology platforms.

Video store closing marks the end of an era

BY COLLIN OVERTON

It's what looks to be the end of an era, Madison's Family Video location, open since 2010, will close next month due to the company's ongoing financial struggles amid a resurging COVID-19 pandemic combined with a viewer shift to online options for movie and gaming content.

The move marks the closing of the final local brick and mortar outlet dedicated to movie and game rental in a industry that began here in the early 1980s and involved more than a dozen shops at its peak while transitioning from various platforms from beta video to high definition DVDs over the past four decades.

"We are very thankful to have been able to provide entertainment for many family movie nights, and want to thank the people of Madison and our incredible staff for the many years of support and service," said Keith Hoogland, CEO of owner Highland Ventures, LTD.

With the pandemic taking a toll on many already-struggling industries, the Glenview, Illinois-based company announced in October it would close more than 200 stores throughout the Midwest and South, including locations like Valparaiso in Indiana and others in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky as well as other states.

Madison continues athletic upgrades with new press box

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The Madison Consolidated Board of School trustees approved a $254,000 contract with stadium construction firm Dan Clayton Wednesday night to build a new press box in what will be the second phase of upgrades for the football-track athletic complex at the high school.

The board approved a $5.3 million bond issue in February that covered a new turf football field and Mondo track, plus solar panels at different district buildings, and previewed more changes to come like a new concession stand, locker room and press box.

The press box is the next step in the process and to create a more professional-grade facility for broadcasting, student media and hosting events, Madison Superintendent Jeff Studebaker said Wednesday.

Studebaker talked about the need for the new press box at the board's Nov. 5 work session, describing the current box as about the size of a single-wide trailer with missing girder support, no heating or cooling and a rotting floor and foundation. A few years ago, a coach's leg went through the floor due to water leaks and cheap construction of the small building, he said.

The floor has since been replaced, but even that repair begun to deteriorate,

Area COVID-19 numbers keep climbing

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Jefferson County's number of COVID-19 cases increased to 738 on Friday — including 37 new cases and 348 active cases — and there have been nine total deaths linked to the pandemic since June.

Mayor Bob Courtney, who is self-quarantining with his wife, Tammy, this week after she tested positive for the virus recently, said both are doing fine and appreciate the support they are receiving while in quarantine. He also encouraged all Jefferson County residents to be COVID-19 tested and follow CDC guidelines aimed at slowing the spread of the virus.

Courtney said the City of Madison will announce new efforts to "Get Back to Blue" on the state metric map. Jefferson County is currently in the red zone, meaning the county must revert back to tighter crowd-size limits based on Gov. Eric Holcomb's executive order on Wednesday.

Currently, Madison Consolidated High School, Southwestern Jefferson County Schools, Prince of Peace Catholic Schools, Canaan Community Academy and Hanover College have shifted to virtual learning due to the virus impact on students, faculty and staff.

According to the Regenstrief Institute dashboard, Jefferson has had 38 total hospitalizations from March 1 through Nov. 12 including seven who were treated in the Intensive Care Unit. A total of 92 people were seen at the emergency room and three of the nine death have come at the hospital.

Meanwhile, on Friday Indiana stood at 236,565 positive cases of the coronavirus overall — including 5,708 new cases on Thursday and 50 new deaths — with 4,613 deaths overall.

Switzerland County now has about 200 positive cases and one death and the county's infection numbers have doubled since the beginning of the month.

Across the Ohio River, Carroll County has reported 258 positive cases and six deaths and Trimble County has seen 131 cases and one death as the most recent reporting.

More recently, the Scottsburg and New Albany stores announced they were also closing.

Family Video is now down to about 300 stores throughout the country, the company said on its website, after struggling to keep up with the influx of Netflix, Hulu and other streaming platforms. The company had more than 700 locations in 2018, according to Newsweek.

In recent years the company has tried to make up for declining rental revenue by selling CBD products and Marco's Pizza at certain locations. Family Video joins a host of other retail businesses with Madison locations closing this year, including JCPenney and Gordman's.

"You may have heard that we're closing select locations ... it's true. We've enjoyed serving so many communities over the years, but recent events have caused us to make some tough business decision[s]," Family Video said in a statement on its website.

Store manager Leila Cassidy said employees were notified earlier this month that the location would close on Dec. 20. The Madison location, the city's final video rental store, is liquidating all of its merchandise on sale until then, she said.

Cassidy said a two-month shutdown for COVID-19 accelerated business struggles. Since reopening, things had been even slower for the DVD rental store, she said.

"It's definitely been slower. I think now that we're selling things off we've been the busiest we've been the whole year," Cassidy said.

The North Vernon store is the closest Family Video remaining open for now, she said.

Cassidy, 25, has worked for the Madison store for five years and noticed business slowing as streaming grew in popularity. She said two employees used to work the registers most of the time, but gradually that was reduced to one person running the store at a time. The store is now down to four total employees.

"We had a lot of people after we opened back up from being shut down tell us 'We haven't been in here because we switched and got Netflix' or 'We got Disney Plus,' " she said.

With the era of video stores coming to a close, Cassidy is grateful for the regulars who stopped by even more during the pandemic.

"We're pretty sad, because even in the time we slowed down after being shut down for the pandemic, we still had our regular customers who came in four, five or more times in the week, so it obviously has brought them down that we're closing," she said. "We appreciate all those who did stick with us through everything up to the end now."

"I studied video production at Hanover College because it has been something I've always loved, but reporting was something that I had never thought about," said Holley, who added that she's always had an interest in cameras dating back to childhood and was already creating video projects in high school. "I took a class on broadcasting, and I loved the thrill of finding stories and meeting new people."

"Lindsay has been on the job about two weeks and is already producing interesting and informative stories from our community for our viewers at WKMNEWS.COM — all while relocating to Madison and getting settled in the community," Madison Courier Editor Mark Campbell said. "She has shown that she is a skilled videographer and editor, an energetic and interested employee and she is enthused about reporting on our communities. She's just the kind of employee we want for our viewers and readers."

Holley was actually born in Madison but her family relocated to the small community of DeMotte in northwestern Indiana when she was 10 months old. However, she's always remained close to Madison and visited often while growing up.

Holley developed an even greater fondness for Madison and Jefferson County while attending Hanover College so when there was an opportunity to work and live here, the decision to return to the area just months after graduating was easy.

Lindsay and her boyfriend, Chris Schlenker, whom she met at Hanover College, have now settled in — they've already adopted a kitten from the local animal shelter — and she's ready to tackle the news coverage and advertising production needs of WKM News viewers and advertisers. You can also expect to also see Lindsay's work in The Madison Courier print edition as part of our overall cooperative news coverage team.

City of Madison cancels three holiday events

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

With recent spikes in the number of COVID-19 cases in Jefferson County, the City of Madison acted Friday to cancel three events that had been planned to ring in the Christmas holiday season.

The City of Madison's "A Very Merry Christmas Parade" and "Christmas Festival on Main" are both canceled. The lights at the Broadway Fountain will still be illuminated to kick off the season, but the city will not host this year's "Light Up Madison" event. The Parks Department "Christmas Craft Show" is also canceled.

"This was a difficult decision for us to make, but the health of our community must come first. Unfortunately, as temperatures have dropped, individuals have moved to gathering indoors, and we have seen a spike in our COVID-19 cases, as expected. Due to this spike, our county is currently coded orange per ISDH criteria. Our goal is to "Get Back to Blue", which is why we believe it is best to cancel these events" said Mayor Bob Courtney, himself currently self-quarantining at home after his wife, intensive care nurse Tammy Courtney, tested positive for COVID earlier this week.

Beginning Dec. 1, families and visitors can also enjoy holiday lights across the community from the safety of their car. The city has partnered with Visit Madison Inc. and the Madison Main Street Program to host a residential holiday decorating contest for all Jefferson County residents.

According to a news release by the city, while the annual holiday events will not be happening, the City of Madison will still be filled with holiday joy. We encourage families and visitors to head downtown to see the wreaths on Main Street and the lights at the Broadway Fountain, which will be lit by the mayor at an undisclosed time on Nov. 27. While downtown, stop by our local shops who have pledged to make your health and safety their top priority, hop in your car, and head to Vaughn Drive to see "Wonderland Drive," a lights display along the riverfront, then head up to the hilltop for dinner or coffee.

Beginning Dec. 1, families and visitors can also enjoy holiday lights across the community from the safety of their car. The city has partnered with Visit Madison Inc. and the Madison Main Street Program to host a residential holiday decorating contest for all Jefferson County residents. Those wishing to participate in the contest must register by Nov. 27 and have their homes decorated by Dec. 1. Winners will receive $200 in Chamber Cash. Details are available at https://visitmadison.org/merrymadisonhomedecoratingextravaganza/.

Additionally, Santa Claus will still be coming to town. Santa's cottage will be placed at the Comfort Station as in years past, but children will not be able to enter the cottage. Instead, Santa will remain indoors working in his shop while children and families visit from a safe distance outdoors. For Santa's complete schedule, please visit madison-in.gov/268/Christmas-in-Madison.

"It is important that we work together as a community to get Madison back on track and to have a safe holiday season. Watch for more announcements soon," said Courtney.

Indiana State Police assists U.S. marshals in locating wanted subjects

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

A man and woman wanted by US Marshals in Oklahoma were arrested on those outstanding warrants as well as additional drug charges on Tuesday after a tip that they were at a local Walmart in Clarksville.

Tom Baker

Linda Swift

US Marshals contacted the Indiana State Police Drug Enforcement Section and the All Crimes Policing Squad in Sellersburg with information that a California couple wanted on warrants out of Oklahoma were possibly in Clarksville. Marshals provided a description of both subjects and a vehicle description along with a possible location.

Shortly after arriving in the target area, ISP units, along with K9 Riggs, located the subjects in their vehicle in the Clarksville Walmart parking lot. After confirming their identity, both subjects were taken into custody on the warrants.

A subsequent investigation led officers to request a search warrant for the couple's vehicle. That investigation uncovered methamphetamine, marijuana, and paraphernalia resulting in additional charges.

Both subjects were arrested and transported to the Clark County Jail to await extradition on the Oklahoma warrants.

Tom Baker, 50, of Corona, California, and Linda Swift, 69, of Artois, California, were arrested and charged on the warrants from the state of Oklahoma, which were for dangerous drugs and they were also charged with dealing in methamphetamine, a Level 5 felony; possession of methamphetamine, a Level 6 felony; and possession of marijuana and possession of paraphernalia, both Class A misdemeanors.

State transportation secretary: Repairs to bridge linking Ohio, Kentucky to take weeks

The bridge's closure has caused massive detours along a major transportation artery connecting downtown Cincinnati with northern Kentucky across the Ohio River. Kentucky and Ohio officials said they're committed to getting the bridge repaired and reopened as quickly as possible. The span carries about 160,000 vehicles a day, Kentucky officials said.

CINCINNATI — Repairs to a bridge linking Ohio and Kentucky that was damaged by a fiery truck crash will take weeks, Kentucky's transportation secretary said Thursday.

Inspectors went on the Brent Spence Bridge to assess damage after workers cleared away debris and the bridge cooled down from the extreme heat from the crash early Wednesday.

Officials don't yet know the extent of damage, but Kentucky Transportation Secretary Jim Gray said: "We know that under the best case, we have repairs that will take weeks to execute."

The bridge's closure has caused massive detours along a major transportation artery connecting downtown Cincinnati with northern Kentucky across the Ohio River. Kentucky and Ohio officials said they're committed to getting the bridge repaired and reopened as quickly as possible. The span carries about 160,000 vehicles a day, Kentucky officials said.

Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear said the crash occurred around 2:45 a.m. Wednesday, apparently when a truck jackknifed on the bridge and was struck by another truck hauling potassium hydroxide. No injuries were reported. The crash sparked the fire, with 400 gallons of diesel fuel as the main cause, officials said. An undetermined amount of diesel fuel spilled and burned in the fire.

The intense fire left crews with "complicated" jobs to evaluate and repair the damage, Beshear said.

Officials were proceeding on multiple tracks, even as the bridge assessments continued.

"We're already engaged in securing the supplies, the vendors, the contractors that we know will be needed, regardless of the specific details of the eventual repair work," Gray said.

Kentucky will request federal assistance for the repairs, he said.

JEFFERSON COUNTY COUNCIL

Funds pledged to match bridge grant application

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Jefferson County Council on Tuesday pledged almost $400,000 in county road funds to match up to $1.5 million in federal dollars in the event that the county's application for a bridge replacement grant is funded in 2021.

Jefferson County Highway Department Superintendent Robert Phillips presented the proposal to the Council noting that Bridge 107 is in need of replacement and the project has been estimated to cost almost $2 million.

Phillips said he wanted to pursue a federal grant for $1,575,200 but at an 80/20 match the county would still have to come up with about $393,800 to fund the work. He was asking Council to pledge the matching funds in the event the county receives the grant.

The application is expected to by filed by mid-December and it will take six months to a year to learn if the application has been approved.

The council also earmarked another $94,500 to see the Jefferson County Jail through 2020 and cover ongoing costs to house inmates at jails in other counties due to overcrowding at the jail in downtown Madison.

Sheriff Dave Thomas said the cost could be even more but he has been pulling more inmates back into the county jail in recent weeks due to court cancellations related to the COVID-19 pandemic and the fact that most jails are closing ranks on the transfer of prisoners to limit exposure to the coronavirus.

"Most sheriffs are scared of moving people in and out," Thomas said, noting that the Jefferson County Jail screens inmates and employees and constantly sanitizes the facility. He said the jail so far has not recorded a single case of COVID-19 among inmates.

Thomas said the current jail population was at 132 inmates — about 12-15 more than he had been striving to stay at — but that that with the courts and attorneys conducting most business by Zoom teleconference, the work load for the jail staff has increased due to so much court activity being conducted in the jail rather than at courtrooms in the courthouse next door.

"Everybody wants to Zoom but there is work to setting all that up," Thomas said. "Nobody wants to come to the jail."

On the other hand, by conducting a lot of the court appearances by Zoom the sheriff's department has saved staff time and gas expenses over what it previously cost to transport inmates and the Council was able to reallocate some of that surplus for help increase clothing allowances and buy more radios. The Council will also make pay adjustments to the jail commander and jail matron salaries to provide each position another $1,000 in 2021 since they did not receive increases when other staff members received pay upgrades in the 2021 budget.

In other business, the Council:

— Heard a plea from County Assessor Karen Mannix to not cut a full-time position from her office staff in the 2021 budget. Mannix, who was also before the Council last month, said losing a staff member would make it difficult for her office to keep up with the workload and make deadlines. She offered some budget cuts and noted that some fees are scheduled to increase in 2021 as a way to offset the salary. The Council agreed to review the matter and make a decision once the budget allocation is set by the state in early December and a better idea of the revenue forecast can be established.

— Approved allocations to the Boy Scouts of America and the Heritage Trail of Conservancy of Madison. The scouts will receive $15,000 to help make improvements to Camp Louis Ernst and the Conservancy will receive $25,000 to help fund the purchase of property needed to complete a Heritage Trail park in downtown Madison. Both requests were recently heard by Jefferson County Commissioners.

Bridge work expected to finish by year's end

Mark Campbell

Workers for Louisville Paving and Construction use a pair of cranes to lift massive steel-reinforced concrete beams into place Thursday to form the base of the new bridge deck over Indian Kentucky Creek on Dog Run near North China Manville Road in Jefferson County. The bridge has been closed since Oct. 14 but work to replace the span is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Kentucky high court upholds governor's powers to fight virus

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's Supreme Court on Thursday upheld the governor's authority to issue coronavirus-related restrictions on businesses and individuals to try to contain the spread of COVID-19.

The ruling delivered a victory for Democratic Gov. Andy Beshear in a legal fight with the state's Republican attorney general, Daniel Cameron, over the breadth of the governor's emergency powers. The decision comes amid Kentucky's worst surge of virus cases since the pandemic began.

"This is a decisive ruling and it is a win that protects all Kentuckians," Beshear said, adding that he hopes it persuades more people to follow guidelines aimed at stemming the virus's spread.

> "This is a decisive ruling and it is a win that protects all Kentuckians."

The high-stakes case tested the legality of Beshear's orders to try to control the virus's spread by restricting public behavior.

At stake were a multitude of Beshear's orders that include restricting the number of children in day cares and crowd sizes at public events.

Also on the line was the governor's order requiring most people to wear masks in public.

In its unanimous ruling, the Supreme Court said Beshear properly declared a state of emergency and validly invoked his emergency powers under state law to combat the health crisis.

The ongoing pandemic is "precisely the type of emergency that requires a statewide response and properly serves as a basis for the governor's actions" under state law, Justice Lisabeth T. Hughes wrote.

Beshear said the ruling sent a clear message that his actions are "legal and constitutional and fundamental" to deal with a health crisis requiring a "comprehensive, statewide approach.

as has the foundation, Studebaker added.

Dan Clayton Corp. will build the new press box in the coming months after being recommended to the school by the Motz Group, the company in charge of the new football at Madison, the Indianapolis Colts and numerous other schools in the region.

Studebaker said while he's "not jumping up and down about the price tag," the box would sufficiently meet their needs and hopefully be one more key to hosting Indiana State High School Music Association competitions in a few years, a major revenue draw for any host school. The contract does not include the cost of demolition.

The board unanimously approved the contract.

In other business, the board approved this year's collective bargaining agreement between the district and the Madison Teacher's Association and made several other human resources-related changes.

This year's negotiations yielded a 1.5% stipend to all eligible teachers (a $120,726 expense overall), base salary increases for 28 teachers ($63,400 total) and an agreement for Madison to cover a 0.67% increase in health insurance premiums for teachers.

The contract also agreed to change the deadline for a $3,500 incentive to retire provision to Jan. 1, 2021 for the first 10 teachers who notify the district. Other changes include a new compensation model for virtual teachers, a program for helping offset the cost of new teaching certifications for staff and removing coordinators, specialists and interventionalists from the bargaining unit.

The board then addressed the current pandemic situation in Jefferson County, which forced Madison to resort to virtual learning this week amid staff shortages and positive tests. On Friday Madison Athletic Director Joe Bronkella and Southwestern Jefferson County Consolidated School Corporation A.D. Tom Scroggins issued a joint statement announcing another postponement of the annual Turkey Shootout boys and girls basketball games to late January due to tighter crowd restrictions that issued by Gov. Eric Holcomb this weekamd impacting Jefferson County.

Student representative Jacob Smith addressed this and what he and others at Madison called the "White House down" situation in his report, adding that he was one of three positive cases in the district following fall break last month.

Studebaker then relayed statistics on COVID rates at each district school. As of the meeting Wednesday night, the high school and E.O. Muncie alternative school had a combined rate of 0.007% while the junior high and Anderson Elementary were both at 0.003%, Rykers' Ridge Elementary was at 0.005%, Deputy was at 0.001% with only one student testing positive and Lydia Middleton had no cases as of Wednesday, but was waiting to hear back on a test result.

He said that while having cases in every building is alarming, the number remains low and the district would not allow rates to climb to a point in which a total shutdown is necessary.

"The student positivity rate in each of our buildings is low. We don't want to see any positive cases, but we do have positive cases in nearly all of our buildings … We know that even one case rattles everybody. We understand how hard that it is," Studebaker said.

"The DOE (Department of Education) has actually put out their guidance that if a building hits 20%, that's when you would actually close. Folks, we're not going to allow it to get to 20% … when you start doing the math on it, 20% of a building with 800 kids is 160 kids. There is no way we're going to be at those stakes."

Other highlights from Wednesday's meeting included:

- Board approval of a 1.5% performance stipend for administrators to match the stipend approved for teachers in the bargaining agreement.
- Board approval giving the superintendent and Director of Finance and Human Resources Bonnie Hensler authority to grant additional personal leave days for non-certified employees, including but not limited to snow days and health-related emergencies.
- Board approval for the purchase of an electronic display totaling $186,353 from Daktronics that covers video boards and a display panel at the scorer's table in Connor K. Salm Gymnasium.

home where he witnessed but did nothing to stop the abuse.

Pace, who has been incarcerated since his arrest, pleaded guilty to a Level 3 felony before Jefferson Circuit Judge D.J. Mote in September.

Mote followed recommendations by the prosecution on Friday when he sentenced Pace to nine years in the Indiana Department of Correction with three years of that sentence executed and six years suspended in lieu of six years supervised probation with the Jefferson County Community Corrections.

Pace will receive credit for time already served — 501 actual days and 167 good time days for a total of 668 days credit — and will be eligible for probation after serving 320 more days based on good time credits.

In announcing his verdict, Mote noted that Pace's lack of physical participation in the assault and battery of the girl and his decreased mental capacity — he has the mental maturity of a 13 or 14 year old — were factors in his leniency.

Mote also agreed to recommend that Pace serve his time in a minimum security facility but noted that it will be up to the DOC to evaluate and determine his security status upon intake.

"This offense was serious but he did not participate," the judge noted.

The hearing was held on Zoom with court officials and Pace's grandparents looking on. Mote told Pace that with good behavior he stands to be released very soon and did he have a plan going forward. Pace said that he hoped to get a job and provide for his baby and grandparents.

The other two defeats in the case had been sentenced earlier.

Elaine Hines, now 18, pleading guilty to kidnapping, a Level 3 felony, and was sentenced to 12 years in prison with six years of that on supervised probation with the community corrections.

Hailey P. Bartley, now 17, pleaded guilty to criminal confinement, a Level 3 felony, and was sentenced to 10 years in prison with six of that on supervised probation with community corrections.

Should you continue to work after retiring?

Stephen Dybwad

"Layin' it on the line"

"Many retirees choose to take up a side gig or start a new full-time career after retiring. Some of the reasons for doing so might surprise you."- Steve Dybwad

While economic necessity is a not insignificant driver in the trend of seniors working in retirement, there are other reasons for doing so, which may not be as apparent.

If you are someone who is already in retirement or about to retire, should you consider starting a business, new career, or taking up a "side hustle?" What are some of the benefits of working even though you may no longer have to? Are there intangible emotional and psychological benefits of work that you can't get any other way?

Let's look at a few economic and non-economic reasons that pre-retirees and retirees decide to return to the workplace.

Help with delaying Social Security payouts. Most people are aware that delaying Social Security benefits will generally result in larger monthly distributions. Starting payments before your full retirement age could potentially reduce benefits by up to 30%. Having extra money available through a job or side gig can help you delay Social Security payouts for as long as you can. Getting more out of Social Security is one reason that seniors choose to work full or part-time during their retirement years.

Keeping the bloom on the rose. When you are still slogging to the office every day, irritating your ulcers with lousy coffee, annoying bosses, and mundane, sometimes pointless tasks, it's easy to fantasize about what life will look like once you no longer punch the clock. Those fantasies tend to fade pretty quickly once work stops, though.
Plus, one out of four Americans will live past age 90. There's a chance you'll run out of meaningful things to do at some point. Working, especially at a job that is unlike your previous career, can give you a renewed sense of purpose and motivation.

Reduce anxiety through financial stability. Even if you managed to save and invest enough to cover your necessary expenses in retirement, unexpected costs are always lurking in the background, ready to sucker punch at your most vulnerable.

Some seniors continue to work to shore up their retirement plans or pursue alternative investments and cash-producing assets.

Enhancing medical benefits. If you retire before you are eligible for Medicare, you might be in for a shock when it comes to healthcare costs. Even if you qualify for Medicare, you might discover that out-of-pocket expenses are more significant than you ever anticipated. Working a job that provides health benefits or supplemental insurance can help you fill in some of the gaps in your Medicare coverage.
They are helping loved ones. Some seniors return to the workforce to assist struggling family members, help with grandkids' college expenses, or inject cash into family businesses. In some cases, seniors may return to work because they gain custody of a grandchild or have an adult child with disabilities.

Emotional Well-Being: Senior workers are investing in their emotional and physical well-being. Many people define themselves in terms of their professions. Losing the sense of identity tied to one's career is a reason that seniors can find themselves moody, depressed, and unmotivated. They may become disengaged from life to the extent that they suffer a more rapid cognitive and physical decline. Starting a post-retirement career has demonstrated emotional, physical, and mental health benefits. Some experts have suggested that working even one year after retirement can lower the risk of dying.

Putting it into perspective: Working into retirement, starting a new business, or developing a successful "side hustle" benefits seniors in several tangible and intangible ways. Not only does the extra money earned increase financial stability but working can improve physical and emotional well-being and provide a sense of purpose and usefulness.

Switzerland throttles South Dearborn, 56-19, in opener

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Switzerland County played like a team itching to get on the floor, rolling to a dominating 56-19 girls basketball win over South Dearborn in the Pacers' season opener on Thursday.

Like many schools, Switzerland has had its share of issues with COVID-19 recently and the Pacers were forced to open the season a week later than most of their contemporaries. But once the team hit the floor it was lights-out for South Dearborn.

"We've been chomping to get a game in and after 20 practices we were ready to go," Switzerland coach Mark Boggs said. "It was a typical first game. You're going to see some highs and some lows, but overall, we really like this team and the senior leadership we have."

Switzerland deployed a devastating full-court press on the Knights and the result was a first quarter that essentially put the game away. The Pacers forced 12 turnovers over the first eight minutes and rolled to a 17-0 lead before the first horn sounded.

South Dearborn finally broke up the shutout with a free throw early in the second quarter but it was too little, too late as Switzerland took a 34-3 lead at the half and never looked back.

Dearborn coughed up the ball 21 times in the first half in total and even when the Pacers weren't pressing they were able to force turnovers. It was that defensive effort that made Boggs smile.

"We like it and we're going to look to tighten it up a little bit," Boggs said of the press. "We got a little bit out of area at times and were still able to get a steal so we need to tighten it up a little bit. But I think you'll see it quite a bit (this season.)"

Switzerland County (1-0) led 41-3 before South Dearborn put together its best stretch of the game, scoring eight-straight points to close their gap to 44-12 by the end of the third. But the Pacers regrouped in the fourth with a 10-0 run and cruised to the win.

With only 11 players available, Boggs wasn't able to dig too deep into his bench and nine different players scored. Junior Maddie Duvall tied her career-high with 17 points to lead the way while twin sister Jessie scored 14. Senior Keirstan Oeffinger added seven points and Gracie White scored five off the bench.

Emily Elliott led South Dearborn (0-1) with six points and Zoe Ross scored four.

David Campbell

Switzerland County's Maddie Duvall slices to the basket for two of her game-high 17 points in the Pacers' win over South Dearborn on Thursday.

The game was the first of three over three days for the Pacers, who hosted Madison on Friday night. Switzerland heads to Henryville on Saturday night.

Turkey Shootout games moved to January

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Officials at Madison and Southwestern high schools have opted to move the annual Turkey Shootout games for a second time this season in light of restrictions handed down by Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb on Wednesday.

The boys-girls doubleheader, which has been contested on Thanksgiving for the past 20 years, was initially spread out over two days with the boys playing on Tuesday, Nov. 23 and the girls on Wednesday, Nov. 24, in order to allow a maximum of 2,500 fans for both games.

But Holcomb's order on Wednesday limited attendance at high school events to 25% of gym capacity. That means that no more than 1,000 fans could attend either game.

After discussing that with his counterparts at Southwestern, Madison Athletic Director Joe Bronkella made the call on Thursday to reschedule the games.

"After careful consideration of the county numbers, new state-level mandates, and with an abundance of caution for the health and safety of our athletes and fans, our schools jointly decided it would be in the best interest of our community to once again reschedule the games," Bronkella said in a statement. "The health and safety of our students is our first priority."

The boys game will now be played on Friday, Jan. 22 with the girls game on Saturday, Jan. 30, both at Madison. A Southwestern boys game against Christian Academy of Indiana on Jan. 22 will be rescheduled.

Madison JV opens season

Madison's junior varsity girls basketball team opened the 2020-21 season with a pair of losses recently.

On Saturday, the Cubs lost 6-42 loss at Charlestown. Patty Johnson led the Cubs with nine points while Cameran Cahall and Alaina Kelley scored eight points each.

On Tuesday, Madison lost 38-22 to Lawrenceburg at home. Kelley had six points while Johnson and Caitlyn Daily scored four each.

Local grapplers looking to make moves in 2021

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

With a total of five semistate qualifiers back from last season, there are plenty of reasons to be excited this year for the wrestling programs at three local schools.

Madison is coming off its best season in nearly a decade and looking to continue that upward trend while both Southwestern and Switzerland County continue to build their programs.

A look at all three schools:

MADISON CUBS

Madison gradated semistate qualifiers Jacob McRoberts and Tucker Adams and set a school record for wins with 33, but there are plenty of reasons to believe the Cubs could be even better this season.

Madison returns three semistate qualifiers — led by Madison Courier Wrestler of the Year Van Skinner — and four other regional qualifiers and has high hopes this season.

Van Skinner had a stellar freshman campaign last year, going 47-5 at 170 pounds and reaching the semistate despite a series of nagging injures at the end of the season. There is every reason to believe that Skinner could wrestle for a state championship this season.

"Van broke four out of the five freshmen records we keep last year and finished second in the fifth. He has set the bar very high for himself so it will be interesting to see how his sophomore season pans out," Madison coach Tyson Skinner, Van's father, said. "Van currently is ranked 12th preseason at 182 but will more than likely remain at 170."

There are several other Madison wrestlers who could break through to reach the state finals. Senior Dalton Berry went 38-13 at 195 last year while junior Noah Burkhardt was 42-9 at 126 as both qualified for semistate. Seniors Dylan Fulton (220), Kelsey Bilz (106) and Luke McCarty (160), and junior Bryce Turner (113) each reached the regional last year. Bilz also reached the girls state finals for a second year in a row, placing fourth.

"Dalton flourished last year as a junior and I expect even bigger things from him this year. Noah was another surprise last year and is our top lightweight and could make a run to Bankers Life this year," Coach Skinner said. "Kelsey has been named to the early watch list for the state of Indiana top female Wrestler of the Year. She is one of the meanest and toughest kids in our room."

Senior Trenton Stockdale (152 pounds), junior Drake Youngblood (182), and sophomores Emmett Willhite (138), Louis Humes (145), Collin Fulton (285), and Brayden Richards (145) round out the roster.

Madison was scheduled to open the season on Monday at home against Southwestern but that match has been moved to Dec. 15. The Cubs' season opener will now be on Friday, Nov. 20 at home against Switzerland County, Salem and Greensburg.

SOUTHWESTERN REBELS

Southwestern has only nine wrestlers this year but nearly half competed in the regional a year ago.

Senior Brady McLain had the longest run, winning the sectional title and reaching the semistate at 195 pounds while going 32-8 on the season. Senior Cameron Canada was 27-12 at 120, junior Brandon Smith finished 22-5 at 145, and sophomore Matthew Douglas went 15-20 at 182.

Senior Nick Taylor, juniors Brayden Kunze and Dawson Lichlyter, sophomore Elijah Weatherbee, and freshman Keegan Gross round out the roster.

Southwestern was scheduled to open the season on Monday at Madison but that match has been moved to Dec. 15. The Rebels now open the season Nov. 21 at Brown County.

SWITZERLAND CO. PACERS

Switzerland County's program is still in the early phases but the Pacers enjoyed their best season a year ago.

Brothers Jacob and Austin Wolf both reached the semistate last season and are looking to build on that in their senior year. Jacob went 30-13 at 132 pounds and was the sectional runner-up while Austin was 27-10 at 126 and won the Southern Indiana Wrestling Conference title.

Three other wrestlers will try to make an impact this season. Senior Tyler Lieland will compete at 195, sophomore Wylden Washnock at 120 and freshman Gabe Jackson at 126.

"I feel that we're going to have a great year individually but we're going to have a hard time as a team with only five wrestlers on our roster. But we have five kids that are working hard and want to make a huge impact in the conference and state tournament," Switzerland coach David Wolf said. "(Washnock has) grown a lot over the summer both mentally and physically and I'm super excited to see what the future holds for him. Gabe is someone that really sets the tone in the practice room for us."

Switzerland opens the season on Nov. 20 in a quad meet at Madison.

Son invited ex to live with us

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am a 58-year-old woman who shares a split-level house with my adult son, "Brad." Brad lives downstairs in what is essentially a separate two-bedroom apartment with his 10-year-old daughter, although it's technically one unit. Brad and I split the rent evenly.

Last year, my mother was dying, and I went to stay with her for some time to say goodbye. When I returned home, I found that my ex-husband, "Lester," was living in the downstairs apartment with our son and granddaughter.

Apparently, Brad and his daughter invited Lester to visit while I was away. Well, six months later, Lester is still living there with them. Lester is not a very nice person. We were married for 16 years.

I asked Brad to ask Lester to leave. He refuses, saying that he feels bad telling him to go. I have asked Lester to leave, and he laughs at me. He says, "This is my son's house."

What should I do? — Put Out

Dear Put Out: It's bad enough that your son invited a long-term guest to stay at the house you two share without first checking with you. It's even worse that the surprise guest is your ex.

Implore your son to try seeing your side of things. Ask him to imagine how he'd feel if you invited his ex to live with you. Sure, Lester is Brad's dad, and, of course, they should spend time together. But there's no reason it needs to be at the home that you two agreed to share together, as mutually respectful roommates.

If he doesn't budge, take a look at your lease. There's a good chance that there's a clause regarding long-term guests. Consider going to the landlord or property manager about the issue.

Dear Annie: I've been seeing my friend for four years. We're technically just friends, but there has always been a romantic tension between us. I do call him pet names like "Bae," and he does the same to me. He's always insisting that we're not together. Yet, if I tell him that I'm going on a date, he gets upset. I have no idea what to call our relationship. I just need him to tell me what this is. — Lonely

Dear Lonely: I'd call it a con job. He's using you for validation, to feel attracted and wanted, yet he refuses to commit to you after four years. Stop seeing him.

Dear Annie: I felt I needed to comment regarding the criticism from "Call Me From Home," who was frustrated that people only called her when they were driving, as if they only wanted to talk when they had nothing better to do.

I, too, use the free time I have driving to call my mom and friends. However, even when I arrive at my destination (usually home), I have on most calls sat in my car parked in my driveway and continued my conversation until its natural end. Works for me and the person I called. While I understand the writer being miffed, I believe getting a call while someone is driving is better than never getting a call. — Marguerite M.

Dear Marguerite: I have to note again that it's important to exercise extra caution when talking on the phone while driving, as it reduces our ability to perceive hazards. But you make a good point that one shouldn't feel slighted for receiving these road calls.

Projecting insecurities onto loved ones

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My girlfriend and I have been together for almost two years. We are both divorced.

I have a few insecurities. She is the greatest thing to ever happen to me, and I'm happier than I have ever been. She is my true love. I will do anything for her, which is why I'm reaching out for advice. I trust her completely, yet one of my insecurities is that I'm always asking if she is happy and if she is OK or sad.

These questions drive her nuts. I want to stop this behavior but want to understand why I do this. My kids say I do it to them, too.

Please help me. I don't want to bury my feelings, but I don't want to say things that drive her crazy. I do not want to lose her because of my stupidity. — Help My Insecurities

Dear Insecurities: Not to worry. Help is on the way. The first step to change is the desire to change, and you have already demonstrated that by writing this letter. The second thing to know is that what you are doing is projecting your own feelings of sadness and feeling not OK onto everyone around you who you love.

Try a morning check-in with yourself. Sit quietly for a few minutes and ask yourself, am I OK or do I feel sad? Then write down how you feel. It's fine to feel sad, and by writing down what is making you sad, you can start to work through it. Remember that these feelings won't last forever. Below is a poem by Jalaluddin Rumi, written more than 800 years ago, with some eternal truths.

"The Guest House"

This being human is a guest house.

Every morning a new arrival.

A joy, a depression, a meanness,

some momentary awareness comes

As an unexpected visitor.

Welcome and entertain them all!

Even if they're a crowd of sorrows,

who violently sweep your house

empty of its furniture,

still treat each guest honorably.

He may be clearing you out for some new delight.

The dark thought, the shame, the malice, meet them at the door laughing and invite them in.

Be grateful for whoever comes,

because each has been sent as a guide from beyond.

As the poem says, picture your feelings as little guests in your house. If we are kind to those feelings and hospitable, they are glad to be acknowledged and appreciated. Seeking the help of a professional therapist will also help greatly.

UK women's basketball coach Mitchell retires, Elzy named interim

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky women's basketball coach Matthew Mitchell announced his retirement Thursday, effective immediately.

Associate coach Kyra Elzy, a former standout player at Oldham County High School and the University of Tennessee, will serve as interim head coach of the 11th-ranked Wildcats.

The 49-year-old Mitchell, 303-133 in 13 seasons at Kentucky and 333-162 overall, cited "an eventful offseason" with a head injury and subsequent surgery this summer to relieve a subdural hematoma in a release Thursday night. He said he did not feel he could give the job what it requires with the season about to start later this month.

"I have been open about the fact that the surgery and recovery process has been life-altering for me and my family," Mitchell said in a statement. "Through that, my priorities toward my family and my faith has grown even larger than before and that has led me to make this decision.

"Although so much about today is sad because I will greatly miss the relationships and people that have constantly lifted up my family and me the last 13 years, I am resolute in my decision and comfortable with beginning the next chapter of my life."

Kyra Elzy

Mitchell is Kentucky's winningest women's coach, having guided the Wildcats to nine NCAA Tournament berths among 11 postseason appearances. He led the team to the Southeastern Conference regular season championship in 2012 and was named Coach of the Year by league coaches in 2018-19.

A philosophy built on tight, pressing defense and quick-tempo offense helped Kentucky remain a perennial conference contender. Jovial, outgoing and locquacious, Mitchell was a big pitchman for his program along with several local businesses.

He developed a following for showing nifty dance moves and clever celebrity impersonations during team introductions at Kentucky's annual Big Blue Madness, the preseason public workout for both basketball programs. Mitchell's showmanship sometimes grabbed the spotlight on a night that's often the domain of men's coaching counterpart John Calipari and his highly successful team.

"He has been a great ambassador for the University of Kentucky, on and off the court," athletic director Mitch Barnhart said, "bringing an energy and style of play that made it fun for players and fans alike.

"Matthew, Jenna and their children always will be part of the Wildcat family and we wish them the very best as they enter the next stage of their lives."

Elzy has held associate positions at Kentucky and Tennessee in a coaching career that started in 2002. She takes over a team with its highest Associated Press preseason ranking since 2014-15 (also No.11) and features preseason AP All-America selection Rhyne Howard, a junior guard.

"My immediate focus is on our players and making sure that they are dealing with this change that has happened so abruptly," Elzy said. "As you can understand, this has been difficult for them to process. We met with the players and their families this evening and ensured them that this program will stand on the same principles moving forward."

"It has not totally hit me yet," Elzy, 42, said during an online introductory news conference Friday. "But I realize that I am taking over a top team in the country and I'm just going to use this as positivity."

Notre Dame, Packers great Hornung dies

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Paul Hornung, the dazzling "Golden Boy" of the Green Bay Packers whose singular ability to generate points as a runner, receiver, quarterback and kicker helped turn the team into an NFL dynasty, died Friday. He was 84.

Hornung's family confirmed his death to the Louisville Sports Commission and to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

In July 2016, Hornung sued equipment manufacturer Riddell Inc., saying football helmets he wore during his professional career failed to protect him from brain injury. Hornung suffered multiple concussions with the Packers and had been diagnosed with dementia, the lawsuit said.

Hornung won the 1956 Heisman Trophy at Notre Dame. He was the NFL MVP in 1961 and played on four championship teams (1961, '62, '65 and '66).

He was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1986.

Hornung and another of the league's top stars, Detroit's Alex Karras, were suspended for 1963 by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for betting on NFL games and associating with undesirable persons. They returned to the NFL the next year.

Hornung won the Heisman as a quarterback. But he switched to halfback in the pros and was one of the NFL's most dynamic players in Green Bay.

Playing alongside numerous future Hall of Famers, the blond, fun-loving Hornung was a favorite of Packers coach Vince Lombardi, who thought of the young star as a son and singled him out for praise and chastisement. Frequent fines for missing curfew were forgiven once the game started, especially when the dashing No. 5 got close to the end zone.

"In the middle of the field he may be only slightly better than an average ballplayer," Lombardi once said, "but inside the 20-yard line he is one of the greatest I have ever seen. He smells that goal line."

No. 10 IU puts unbeaten mark to test at Michigan State

BY NOAH TRISTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

It is probably a good sign for No. 10 Indiana that its quarterback is using cliches about avoiding a letdown.

"We have been having a great season so far, but the season is not over," Michael Penix Jr. said. "We still have games that we are looking forward to like Michigan State this weekend. This is a great program, so we have to come with a positive mindset and keep that 1-0 mindset that we have had."

The Hoosiers haven't often been in this position, unbeaten through three Big Ten games and tied for first in their division. They're ranked in the top 10 for the first time since 1969, and they're trying for their first 4-0 start in conference play since 1987. They're also coming off their first win over Michigan since '87.

Now they will try to buck another trend today. Michigan State has dominated its series with Indiana lately. The Spartans have won 10 of the last 11 meetings in the battle for the Old Brass Spittoon, but Indiana (3-0, 3-0) is certainly favored in this one.

"Indiana's a good football team. I like the way this team is built," Michigan State coach Mel Tucker said. "They are a physical football team, they've got a difference maker at quarterback."

The Spartans (1-2, 1-2) are having their ups and downs in Tucker's first year at the helm. They lost their opener to a Rutgers team that entered the day on a 21-game Big Ten losing streak. Then Michigan State rebounded with a huge road win over rival Michigan. Last weekend, the Spartans took a step back, losing 49-7 at Iowa.

LAST YEAR

Michigan State beat Indiana last season 40-31. Matt Coghlin made a tie-breaking field goal with 5 seconds left, and then the Spartans scored a touchdown on a fumble on the Hoosiers' final offensive play.

AVOIDING MISCUES

The Spartans had seven turnovers in their loss to Rutgers, and Rocky Lombardi threw three interceptions against Iowa. Michigan State seems capable of moving the ball when not turning it over. Lombardi is tied for third in the conference in yards passing per game.

Indiana, on the other hand, has a plus-six turnover margin.

TAKING ADVANTAGE

Indiana is 16 of 16 in the red zone with 12 touchdowns, and it has held opponents to just five TDs in nine red zone opportunities.

DEEP THREATS

Jalen Nailor and Ricky White are each averaging over 20 yards per reception for Michigan State, and Jayden Reed has a team-high 13 catches. All three of those receivers have had a catch of at least 50 yards this year.
